REPORT TO THE COMMUNITY

Artemis  Center
Dayton's Domestic Violence Resource Agency

FROM THE EXECUTIVE DIRECTOR

2025 marked the 40th anniversary for Artemis Center, and another year of meaningful growth. In addition to our foundational services — crisis intervention, safety planning, education, court accompaniment, support groups, and assistance with rapid and transitional housing — we expanded to offer supportive services for survivors of sexual violence. In 2025, Artemis became a dual organization, broadening our reach to serve even more survivors in our community.

According to the CDC, among women, about 1 in 5 experienced contact sexual violence (19.7%), nearly 1 in 4 experienced physical violence (22.5%), and about 1 in 8 were stalked (12.2%). Among men, nearly 1 in 23 experienced contact sexual violence (4.4%), about 1 in 7 experienced physical violence (13.7%), and almost 1 in 24 were stalked (4.2%).

Over their lifetimes, nearly 1 in 3 women and about 1 in 8 men have experienced contact sexual violence, physical violence, and/or stalking, along with at least one related impact — physical injury, missed work or school, safety concerns, medical needs, or filing a police report.

These statistics are staggering, and they are exactly why becoming a dual organization is so critical. Casting our safety net further into the community to support survivors is central to our mission, and we are incredibly proud to be able to meet this growing need — walking alongside even more survivors on their path to safety and healing.

LEAH'S STORY

When Leah started attending support group at Artemis Center, she wasn't sure she belonged. After years of abuse and isolation, she left her relationship. But leaving did not mean the fear was over.

Leah felt alone and exhausted. She went to work, went home, and tried to get through each day. Even after leaving, the harassment continued. She was sleeping on her mother's couch because being alone felt too frightening. Nightmares and memories of the abuse continued to take a toll, and she constantly felt as though her abuser was watching her every move.

At support group, Leah initially kept to herself. She listened as other survivors shared their experiences, slowly recognizing pieces of her own story in theirs. Over time, she began to feel safer and less alone. Through the group, she learned more about the different forms of abuse and the ways her abuser had used control to impact her life. Understanding what had happened to her helped Leah begin to understand that the abuse was not her fault.

With the support of Artemis Center's programs, resources, and advocacy, Leah eventually found her own apartment—the first place that was truly hers. It became more than a new home; it represented a new beginning.

As she unpacked each box, Leah began putting her life back together, one piece at a time. Every item she placed in her new home was a reminder that her abuser could no longer take things from her, destroy what belonged to her, or dictate how she lived.

Little by little, Leah began to reclaim her independence, her sense of safety, and her future.

"The courage and strength I have found, when I didn't have a voice or any place to turn, has given me a sense of belonging. After years of alienation, Artemis is exactly where I belong." -Leah
